- (b) in clause 7 of the Bill, the manner in which a panel may vary or cancel a maintenance service;
- (c) in clause 9 of the Bill, the records of the meetings that must be provided by every registered trade union and employers' organisation;
- (d) in clause 13 of the Bill, the application form of a council or private agency that must be submitted to the governing body for the accreditation of its dispute resolution panel; and
- (e) in clause 16 of the Bill, indicating—
 - (i) the manner of consultation between the advisory arbitration panel and the parties to the dispute;
 - (ii) the panel's terms of reference;

- (iii) the time period for when a registered trade union or employers' organisation must appoint an assessor for the panel and the manner in which the National Economic Development and Labour Council ("NEDLAC") must provide the Director with two lists respectively for the registered trade union and employers' organisation of assessors to choose from;
- (iv) the form on which an advisory arbitration award must be made;
- (v) the form on which a party to the dispute may apply for the extension of the seven day period within which the parties to the dispute must either indicate acceptance or rejection of the award;
- (vi) the manner in which a party to the dispute may reject an advisory arbitration award; and
- (vii) the manner in which the Minister must publish the advisory arbitration award.

2. DISCUSSION OF THE BILL

Clause 1: Amendment of section 32 of the Act

2.1 Section 32: Extension of collective agreement concluded in bargaining council

2.1.1 The following four changes are made to section 32 of the Act:

- (a) The first is the extension of the period within which the Minister must extend a collective agreement if the parties to the agreement are only sufficiently representative. This is to allow for sufficient time for the Minister to consider any comments received in respect of the Minister's notice published in terms of section 32(5)(c) stating that an application for extension has been received.
- (b) The second is the changes to the representativeness requirements for the extension of collective agreements under section 32(2). That section required both the trade union party to the agreement to represent the majority of employees and that the members of the employer organisations party to the agreement to employ the majority of employees within the scope of the agreement. The amendment now only requires one or the other. In order to promote collective bargaining at sectoral level and in accordance with the jurisprudence of the International Labour Organisation ("ILO"), the operating principle underlying the extension of agreements is whether agreement applies to the majority of employees in the sector or scope of the agreement. In other words, the principle is now one of coverage rather than strict representativeness.

- (c) The third is the manner in which representativeness is determined. The original intention of the Act was that the representativeness of bargaining councils and their constituent parties would be determined annually by the Registrar and not each and every time a bargaining council referred a collective agreement to the Minister for extension. The amendments to both section 32(2)(c), (5)(a) and 49 seek to give effect to that intention.
- (d) The fourth is to give the Minister the power to make regulations on the procedures and criteria that bargaining councils must take into consideration for purposes of complying with the requirements for exemptions from collective agreements.

Clause 2: Insertion of section 32A into the Act

2.2 Section 32A: Renewal and extension of funding agreements

2.2.1 The mischief which this amendment seeks to address is that the funding of bargaining councils and their pension, medical aid and other funds are effected through collective agreements. The failure to secure agreement to extend or renew those collective agreements threatens the continued existence of those bargaining councils and funds.

2.2.2 The amendment gives the Minister the power to renew and extend a funding agreement for up to 12 months at the request of any of the parties to the bargaining council if the agreement has expired or the parties to the agreement have failed conclude an agreement to renew or replace the funding agreement 90 days before its expiry. The Minister has to be satisfied though that the failure to renew the funding may undermine collective bargaining at sectoral level.

2.2.3 Provision is also made for a publication and comment procedure before the Minister may make such a decision and effect of a judicial review of such a decision.

Clause 3: Amendment of section 49 of the Act

2.3 Section 49: Representativeness of council

The amendment extends the determination of the representativeness of a bargaining council contemplated in section 49 to two years. Furthermore other amendments are made in order to align the provisions of section 49 of the Act with the amendment in the Bill to section 32 of the Act.

Clause 4: Amendment of section 69 of the Act

2.4 Section 69: Picketing

2.4.1 The thrust of the amendments to section 69 of the Act is to prohibit a picket unless there are picketing rules in place - rules that the trade union is permitted to participate in making. The purpose underlying this limitation of the constitutional right to picket is to require trade unions to take responsibility for pickets to ensure that the constitutional rights of others, such as the constitutional rights to freedom and security of person, freedom of association, fair labour practices and property, are not infringed. The levels of picket line violence that has come to characterise strikes in the last few years requires more stringent regulation to ensure the orderly conduct of pickets in strikes.

Accordingly, the amendments to the section require a commissioner conciliating a dispute or the person appointed by a bargaining council to conciliate a dispute that may lead to a strike or a lockout to determine picketing rules if there is no existing collective agreement regulating picketing or the commissioner has failed to secure an agreement on picketing before the expiry of the conciliation period contemplated in section 64. The commissioner is required to determine the rules at the same time as issuing a certificate of an unresolved dispute in terms of section 64(1)(a) of the Act.

2.4.2 The commissioner, in determining the rules, must do so in accordance with the default picketing rules prescribed or published in a Code of Good Practice and after taking any representations made by the parties to the dispute attending the conciliation meeting. Annexure B of The Code of Good Practice: Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing provide default picketing rules.

2.4.3 Specific provisions are made for a direct application to the Commission on an urgent basis in certain circumstances such as the unilateral alteration of terms and conditions of employment and an unprotected lockout.

Clause 5: Amendment of section 70F of the Act

2.5 Section 70F: Regulations for essential services committee

In view of the regulations by the Minister contemplated in section 70F(1), section 70F(2) of the Act which provides for rules by the Commission, is deleted.

Clauses 6 and 7: Amendment of sections 72 and 75 of the Act respectively2.6 Sections 72 and 75: Minimum services and maintenance services

2.6.1 The amendments to section 72 of the Act provide for the ratification of minimum service agreements by a panel appointed by the essential services committee and a definition of minimum services. The definition clarifies that a minimum service agreement is one in which employees in an essential service are allowed to strike provided that a minimum service maintains a level of production or service at which the life, personal safety or health of the whole or part of the population are not endangered.

2.6.2 Provision is made to permit the panel appointed by the essential services committee to vary or rescind a designation or part of a service as a maintenance service.

Clauses 8 to 10: Amendment of sections 95, 99 and 100 of the Act respectively2.7 Sections 95, 99 and 100: Ad matters concerning a secret ballot

2.7.1 Section 95(5)(p) of the Act requires trade unions and employer organisations that seek registration to have a provision in their constitutions requiring a ballot of members before embarking on a strike or lockout as the case may be.

2.7.2 Section 95(9) of the Act has been inserted to clarify that a ballot means any system of voting by members that is recorded and secret. The clarification is to provide for new technologies of balloting while at the same time ensuring good governance and secrecy.

2.7.3 Section 99 of the Act, which deals with the records that registered trade unions and employer organisations must keep and which includes ballot papers, is amended to include the attendance register and other prescribed record, and other forms of documentary or electronic records of a ballot. Section 100 of the Act is amended accordingly.

Clause 11: Amendment of section 108 of the Act2.8 Section 108: Appointment of registrar of labour relations

2.8.1 Section 108 of the Act is amended in order to clarify that the registrar and deputy registrars are independent and subject to the Constitution and the law must be impartial and exercise their powers and perform their functions without fear, favour or prejudice.

2.8.2 The amendments also include a prohibition on any person or organ of state from interfering with the functioning of the registrar.

Clauses 12 to 14: Amendment of sections 116, 127 and 128 of the Act respectively2.9 Sections 116, 127 and 128: Ad matters concerning the Commission for Conciliation, Mediation and Arbitration

2.9.1 Several amendments are made to various sections dealing with the Commission. The first is to section 116 of the Act which seeks to give the governing body of the Commission the power to appoint an acting chairperson if the chairperson is absent or the office is vacant.

2.9.2 The amendment to section 127 of the Act seeks to provide that a council or private agency may apply for the accreditation of its dispute resolution panel.

2.9.3 The amendment to section 128 of the Act requires that an accredited bargaining council or private agency may only appoint a person to resolve a dispute if that person is accredited by the governing body of the Commission. This has been introduced to ensure that the persons appointed have the requisite qualifications and experience.

Clause 15: Amendment of section 135 of the Act2.10 Section 135: Resolution of disputes through conciliation

2.10.1 The amendments to section 135 of the Act seek to provide for the extension of the 30-day conciliation period in order to ensure a meaningful conciliation process. The commissioner conciliating the dispute or a party to the conciliation may apply to the director of the Commission for an extension provided that the period does not exceed 5 days.

2.10.2 The Director may only extend the period if satisfied that the extension is necessary to ensure a meaningful conciliation process, a party's refusal to agree to the extension is unreasonable and there are reasonable prospects of reaching agreement. No extension is however permitted where the State is the employer.

Clause 16: Insertion of sections 150A, 150B, 150C and 150D into the Act2.11 Sections 150A, 150B, 150C and 150D: Ad matters concerning the advisory arbitration panel

2.11.1 In order to endeavour to resolve strikes or lockout that are intractable, violent or may cause a local or national crisis, the amendments seek to provide for the establishment of an advisory arbitration panel to on an expedited basis investigate the cause and circumstances of the strike or lockout and make an advisory award in order assist the parties in dispute to resolve the dispute.

2.11.2 The Director may only establish an advisory arbitration panel if directed to do so by the Minister or the Labour Court, on application by a party to the dispute or by agreement between the parties and only if one of three circumstances are present namely—

- (a) The strike or lockout is no longer functional to collective bargaining, it has continued for a protracted period and no resolution appears imminent; or

- (b) There is an imminent threat that constitutional rights may be or are being violated by those participating or supporting a strike or lockout through the threat or use of violence or damage to property; or
- (c) The strike or lockout is causing or may cause an acute national or local crisis affecting the conditions for the normal social and economic functioning of the community or society.

2.11.3 All three circumstances are recognised by the ILO as grounds for intervention by the State. The intervention, in accordance with ILO jurisprudence, advisory in nature and only binding if agreed or deemed to be agreed to by the parties to the dispute. The appointment of the advisory arbitration panel does not interrupt or suspend the right to strike or the recourse to lockout.

2.11.4 The Labour Court may only make an order directing the Director to establish an advisory arbitration panel if it is satisfied that the latter two of the three circumstances exist and the application is made by a person or association of person that are or will be materially affected by those circumstances.

2.11.5 The advisory arbitration panel consists of a senior commissioner to chair the panel and an assessor appointed by the employer and trade union parties to the dispute. If the parties do not appoint an assessor within the time to be prescribed by regulation, the Director must appoint an assessor from the lists of employer or trade union assessors determined by organised business and organised labour as constituted in NEDLAC. Provision is also made that if a party to the dispute fails or refuses to participate in the arbitration proceedings, the Director must appoint a person with requisite expertise to represent that party in the proceedings.

2.11.6 The advisory arbitration is to be conducted in a manner that the chairperson considers appropriate in order to make an advisory award fairly and quickly with minimum legal formalities. The chairperson is given all the powers of a commissioner under the Act and the power to order disclosure of information in accordance with section 16 of the Act.

2.11.7 The arbitration panel must conduct its proceedings and issue an advisory award within 7 days of the hearing although provision is made for the Director to extend that period taking into account the urgency of the resolution of the dispute.

2.11.8 The advisory award must report on the factual findings and make motivated recommendations why its recommendations ought to be accepted. If the chairperson is not able to secure consensus of both assessors, the chairperson issues the advisory award on behalf of the panel.

2.11.9 The advisory award must be served on the parties to the dispute. The Minister must publish the award in the prescribed manner for public dissemination within 4 days of its issue.

2.11.10 The parties to the dispute are required to indicate their acceptance or rejection of the dispute of the advisory award within 7 days of the award or, if extended, a maximum of 13 days.

2.11.11 If they fail to do so, the party is deemed to have accepted the award. Before a party to the dispute rejects an award, it must consult with its members in accordance with its constitution and, if it does, it must motivate its rejection in the prescribed manner.

2.11.12 An advisory award is only binding if the party to the dispute has accepted or is deemed to have accepted the award. An advisory award can be extended to employees who are not members of the trade union parties to the dispute in accordance with section 23 of the Act. In the case of bargaining council agreements, the binding nature of an advisory award is determined in accordance with sections 31 and 32 of the Act as if the award was for all intents and purposes a collective agreement.

Clause 17: Amendment of section 208A of the Act

2.12 Section 208A: Delegations

This is a technical amendment in order to align the provisions of section 208A of the Act with the proposed to section 32 of the Act.

Clause 18: Transitional provisions

2.13 Trade union and employer organisation constitutions were registered in the past without strike ballot requirements which is in contravention of section 95(5)(p) of the Act read with section 95(9). The Bill seeks to provide for transitional provisions in order to provide for the Registrar to consult with national office bearers of those unions and employers organisations on the most appropriate means to amend the constitution to comply with section 95(5)(p) of the Act and issue a directive as to the period within which the amendment to the constitution is to be effected in accordance with the amendment procedures set out in their respective constitutions.

2.14 Until a registered trade union or employers' organisation complies with the directive and the requirements of section 95(5)(p) read with section 95(9) of the Act, the trade union or employers' organisation must conduct a secret ballot of members before engaging in a strike or lockout as the case may be.

3. DEPARTMENT/BODIES CONSULTED

The Departments of Economic Development, Small Business Development, Trade and Industry and the National Treasury were consulted on a regular basis during the process of engagement in the National Economic Development and Labour Advisory Council on the Labour Relations Amendment Bill. In addition, the South African Policy Service and the National Prosecuting Authority have also been consulted in relation to the amendments, including the Accord on Collective Bargaining and Industrial Action and the Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing which were developed alongside of the amendments.

Organised business, organised labour and the organised community sector were consulted during the engagement in the National Economic Development and Labour Advisory Council.

4. FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS

The financial implications of the amendments to the Labour Relations Act lie in the cost of publishing the bill, the Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing and the regulations to the Act. Costs will also be incurred by national government in conducting public information sessions for stakeholders that is estimated to amount to R450,000.00.

Further costs associated with implementing the amendments will be incurred by the CCMA in relation to the establishment of Advisory Arbitration Panels, conducting secret ballot's, stakeholder workshops on the Code of Good Practice, commissioner training and material development. The total estimated cost associated with the Labour Relations Act amendments are R27.6 million.

5. IMPLICATIONS FOR PROVINCES

The Labour Relations Act and its implementation is a national competence and there is therefore no direct implication for Provincial government other than the amendments affecting provincial government as an employer that is expected to comply with the legal amendments to the Act.

6. IMPLICATIONS FOR MUNICIPALITIES

The Labour Relations Act and its implementation is a national competence and there is therefore no direct implication for Municipalities other than the amendments affecting them as an employer that is expected to comply with the legal amendments to the Act. The amendments to sections 72 and 75 of the Act dealing with minimum service agreements will be of direct relevance to municipalities as they do operate a number of services that have been determined to be essential.

7. PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

7.1. We have considered all the provisions in the Bill in light of Schedule 4 and 5 to the Constitution and found that the Bill does not deal with any of those matters. In our scrutiny of the provisions of the Bill we observed that the Bill is concerned with the subject matter of labour relations which are not listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution. Since the Bill does not in a substantial measure pertain to matters listed in Schedule 4 and 5 to the Constitution, we are of the opinion that the Bill must be dealt with in accordance with the procedure set out in section 75 of the Constitution.

7.2. It could be argued that labour relations, in particular the provisions which relate to picketing may affect trade and public policing. What is important to note in this instance is that the picketing envisaged by the Bill occur from the perspective of organised labour and in view of the parties involved in organised labour, the effect which picketing may have on trade and policing is negligible. Consequently the provisions in the Bill do not have a substantial effect on matters listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution. In light of the aforesaid we are of the view that the Bill must follow the procedure contemplated in section 75 of the Constitution.

7.3 The Department of Labour and the state law advisers are of the opinion that this Bill must be dealt with in accordance with the procedure established by section 75 of the Constitution since it does not fall within a functional area listed in Schedule 4 to the Constitution.

7.4 The state law advisers is of the opinion that it is not necessary to refer this Bill to the National House of Traditional Leaders in terms of section 18(1)(a) of the Traditional Leadership and Governance Framework Act, 2003 (Act No. 41 of 2003), since it does not contain provisions pertaining to customary law or customs of traditional communities.

FINAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT TEMPLATE (PHASE 2)

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT AMENDMENTS, 2017

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

The Final Impact Assessment: Department of Labour. Amendments to the Labour Relations Act, Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing and Picketing Regulations.

The Final Impact Assessment provides a detailed assessment of legislative amendments, including picketing regulations, to the Labour Relations Act (no 95 of 1995) and a Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing (the Code). The amendments, Code, as well as an Accord on Collective Bargaining and Industrial Action are key outcomes of a two-year engagement process between government, organised business and organised labour in the National Economic Development and Labour Advisory Council (NEDLAC) to address the challenges of labour market stability and wage inequality as posed by the President in his State of the Nation Address in June 2014.

1. The problem Statement/ Theory of Change

1.1. Give summary of the proposal, identifying the problem to be addressed and the root (causes) of the problem that will be addressed by the new rule.

a) Summary of the proposal (Summary Background of the proposed policy/bill/regulations/ other):

Background

Industrial action had been at a record high in South Africa for almost a decade although there have been important fluctuations over time. The average number of strikes over the five-year period 2012 and 2016 is 106.6 per annum or 8.8 strikes per month. Specifically, there were 99 strikes in 2012, increasing to 114 in 2013 with a slight decrease to 88 and 110 in 2014 and 2015 respectively (Department of Labour, 2014). In 2016 industrial action reached the unprecedented high of 122. While these strikes are caused by a variety of factors across industries, the majority are due to wage disputes.

In 2012 a total of 3.3 million working days were lost due to strikes. This number decreased to 1.8 million in 2013 but rose sharply to more than 10 million work days lost in 2014. Subsequent years have seen a decline of work days lost due to strikes, but the trend has been uneven with increases and declines in work days lost due to strikes over time. Between 2008 and 2012, the average number of working days lost amounted to 440 days. According to Brand, this is 14 times the average in all EU countries for the period 2005 to 2009.¹

The impact of industrial action and specifically strikes is severe in any economy as it affects production due to loss of working time, strikes affect earnings of workers and hence also consumption in areas surrounding the locality of a strike. The impact of major and protracted strikes on South Africa's economy are considered to contribute to the country's slow economic growth. "The strikes are estimated to have subtracted about 2 percentage points from growth in the first quarter" (OECD, 2015). The impact of industrial action will vary by strike incident, but strikes of long duration inevitably have a higher cost to employers, employees and communities. The 2014 strike on the platinum belt in the North West province lasted for more than 5 months and was reported to have resulted in 440 000 ounces of lost production of platinum. "The three companies, Impala Platinum, Amplats and Lonmin suffered a total revenue loss of about R24.1 billion during the strike and a further loss of R10.6 billion in wages."²

Another example is that of the strike at Ceres Fruit Growers in 2015 that went on for longer than 4 weeks. In this case, approximately R7million was lost in wages and the strike cost growers in the region of R10million.³

Protracted strikes clearly have a higher impact on employers and employees and it would appear that these have become more significant in recent years. In the five years from 2010 to 2014 there were an average of 12.6 strikes per annum that lasted in excess of 30 days. The total number is 63 strikes that can be considered of long duration. Strikes of long duration are also very often associated with violence, intimidation and damage to property. This was the case in the strikes on the platinum belt and in the Ceres Fruit Growers case.

³ L Mketane, Strike ends after Ceres Fruit signs deal with FAWU. Farmers Weekly, 14 October 2015.

Violence associated with strike action was placed in the spotlight by the Marikana tragedy on 16 August 2012 at the Lonmin Platinum mine when police shot and killed 34 striking miners and wounded 70 others. This followed the brutal murder of two policemen and two security officers by strikers. As Alan Rycroft suggests, “while the extent of the tragedy makes it unique, what is not unique is the resort to violence in strike situations in South Africa. In fact, violence has become normative.”⁴

Rycroft cites the SA Institute of Race Relations in reporting that a total of 181 people have been killed in strike violence in the period 2000 to 2013. During the same period, at least 313 persons were injured and more than 3 058 were arrested for public violence. In addition to the economic cost of strikes, violence during strikes has placed a high human cost on workers, families and communities.

The particular burdens of protracted strikes and strike violence are what triggered the Labour Relations Indaba on 4th November 2014. The Indaba adopted the Ekurhuleni Declaration that captured the agreement by government, organised business and organised labour to work together to, inter alia, consider options to address violence and prolonged strikes in the context of Constitutional rights and to find ways of strengthening and promoting collective bargaining in South Africa. A Technical Task Team was established and met at the National Economic Development and Labour Advisory Council (NEDLAC) during 2015 and 2016.

The amendments to the Labour Relations Act and the Code are two key outcomes of this process. An Accord on Collective Bargaining and Industrial Action was also agreed which seeks to obtain commitment and undertakings from employer organisation, trade unions and agencies to expedite processes, build capacity and assign resources to resolve issues and disputes. The NEDLAC process resulted in an agreement being signed in February 2017 by the social partners.

The process of engagement between the NEDLAC constituencies explored a number of options, but reached agreement on the LRA amendments and the Code which will be summarised below. Alternative options are therefore not explored in this socio-economic impact assessment.

Summary of proposal

The amendments to the LRA deal with the following areas:

i. Extension and renewal of bargaining council agreements (clause 32)

Amendments to this clause change the representativeness requirements for the extension of collective agreements under section 32 and the manner in which representativeness is to be determined. An amendment also gives the Minister the power to renew and extend a funding agreement for up to 12 months at the request of any of the parties to the bargaining council. These provisions are aimed at strengthening collective bargaining.

ii. Picketing (clause 69)

The amendments to section 69 aim to prohibit a picket unless there are picketing rules in place. A Commissioner conciliating a dispute is also required to determine picketing rules if there is no existing collective agreement regulating picketing or there is no agreement between the parties on picketing rules.

In determining the picketing rules, the commissioner must do so in accordance with the default picketing rules contained in the Code and after taking account of representations made by the parties to a dispute.

iii. Minimum and maintenance services (clause 72 and 75)

Amendments to section 72 provide for the ratification of minimum service agreements by a panel appointed by the Essential Services Committee (ESC) and a definition of minimum services.

Provision is made to permit the panel appointed by the ESC to vary or rescind a designation or part of a service as a maintenance service.

iv. Secret ballot (clauses 95 and 99)

The existing LRA (section 95 (5)(p)) requires trade unions and employer organisations that seek registration to have a provision in their constitutions requiring a ballot of members before embarking on a strike or lockout as the case may be.

To clarify that a ballot means any system of voting that is recorded and secret, a definition of a ballot is inserted in section 95.

Section 99 which deals with records that must be kept, including ballot papers, is amended to allow for other forms of documentary or electronic record of a ballot.

v. Registrar of Labour Relations (clause 108)

Section 108 of the LRA is amended to clarify that the Registrar and Deputy Registrar are independent and subject to the Constitution and the LRA and must be impartial and exercise their powers and perform their functions without fear, favour or prejudice.

vi. Commission for Conciliation, Mediation and Arbitration (CCMA) (clauses 116 and 128)

Several amendments are made to various sections of the Act dealing with the CCMA. The one that has socio-economic consequences is the amendment that clarifies that an accredited bargaining council or private agency may only appoint a person to resolve a dispute if that person is accredited by the Governing Body of the CCMA. This amendment will require bargaining council panelists to meet the requirements of accreditation by the CCMA.

vii. Resolution of disputes through conciliation (clause 135)

The amendments to section 135 are to provide for the extension of the 30-day conciliation period in order to ensure a meaningful conciliation process. The commissioner conciliating the dispute or a party to the conciliation may apply to the director of the Commission for an extension provided that the period does not exceed 5 days.

viii. Advisory arbitration panel in the public interest (clauses 150A to 150E)

To endeavour to resolve strikes or lockout that are intractable, violent or may cause a local or national crisis, amendments provide for the establishment of an advisory arbitration panel to on an expedited basis investigate the cause and circumstances of the strike or lockout and make an advisory award in order assist the parties in dispute to resolve the dispute. The parties to the dispute are required to indicate their acceptance or rejection of the advisory award within 7 days of the award or, if extended, within a maximum of 13 days. If they fail to do so the party is deemed to have accepted the award. Before a party to the dispute rejects an award it must consult with its members in accordance with its constitution and must motivate its rejection of the award if it does so.

The Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing

The Code is intended to provide practical guidance on collective bargaining, the resolution of disputes of mutual interest and the resort to industrial action. It is intended to be a guide to those who engage or want to engage in collective bargaining or who seek to resolve disputes of mutual interest by mediation, conciliation, arbitration or as a means of last resort, industrial action.

Picketing Regulations

The Picketing Regulations give effect to the amendment to section 69 of the Act by setting out the process whereby parties to a dispute may not engage in a picket unless there is a collective agreement regulating picketing or an agreement is reached in the conciliation proceedings or picketing rules are determined by a Commissioner of the CCMA. The Regulations also make provision for the distribution of picketing rules.

b) Problem/s and root causes that the proposal is trying to address

Identified Problem	Root causes
Industrial actions becoming violent and continuing unabated for a long time (protracted strikes)	Misalignment between law on strikes and action taken by parties during industrial action.
Collective bargaining agreements that are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> at risk of not being extended due to insufficient representativeness of parties to the collective agreement of a bargaining council at risk of not being renewed posing potential threats for bargaining council funds to collapse. 	Declining membership of trade unions and employer organisations. Challenges to the Minister of Labour's power to extend collective agreements to non-parties Failure to secure agreement between parties to extend or renew funding agreements in bargaining councils

1.2. Describe the intended outcomes of the proposal

At a strategic level, the overall intended outcome of the proposal is to strengthen collective bargaining⁵ and to ensure greater stability in labour relations. This is to be achieved through training of negotiators in accordance with the Code and the use of the new amendments to the LRA to facilitate the extension of collective agreements, including funding agreements and to utilise the section 150 provision for advisory arbitration. The reinvigoration of strike balloting is also intended to contribute to peaceful industrial action.

1.3. Describe the groups that will benefit from the proposal, and the groups that will face the cost. These groups could be described by their role in the economy or in society. As a minimum, consider if there will be specific benefits or costs for the poorest households (earning R 7000 a month or less); for black people, youth or women; for small and emerging enterprise; and /or for rural development. Add more rows if required.

Groups that will benefit	How will they benefit?
Workers	The proposed amendments are intended to provide a stronger environment for collective bargaining and wage negotiations and to ensure that due processes are followed when strikes take place.
Trade Unions	Trade unions will benefit from more flexible ways in which strike ballots may be conducted, the use of advisory arbitration to facilitate settlement of mutual interest disputes and greater stability around collective agreements in bargaining councils.

⁵ Declining representivity of employer and trade union organisations is one of the important factors that weaken collective bargaining. While there are other factors impacting on collective bargaining, government is aware of the long term risk that declining representivity poses to collective bargaining, especially at sectoral level.

Groups that will benefit	How will they benefit?
Employers and employers' associations	Employers and employer associations will benefit from more flexible ways in which ballots prior to a lockout may be conducted, the use of advisory arbitration to facilitate settlement of mutual interest disputes and greater stability around collective agreements in bargaining councils. The provision for default picketing rules are also intended to facilitate orderly behaviour during pickets.
Bargaining councils	Their funds will be guaranteed existence as the extensions of funding agreements is made easier by the amendments.
The nation/ citizens	Greater labour market stability and reduced violence during strikes will be in the public interest and will benefit local communities affected by industrial action.
Government and institutions within the public sector.	Government is the biggest employer in the country and will benefit from the proposals in public sector labour relations. In addition, less effort and resources will be channelled towards strikes, for example - police - are expected to be at work to monitor strikes and when these are at high numbers it translate to police spending more time on monitoring industrial action.

1.5. Report on consultations on the proposal with the affected government agencies, business and other groupings. What do they see as the main benefits, costs and risks? Do they support or oppose the proposal? What amendments do they propose? And have these amendments been incorporated in your proposal?

Consultation took place during 2015-2016 under the auspices of NEDLAC and via a Committee of Principals chaired by the Deputy President. Government was represented in the Committee of Principals by the Ministers of Labour, Finance, Economic Development, Trade and Industry and Small Business. The NEDLAC consultations were facilitated by a Senior Commissioner of the CCMA who provided regular reports to the Committee of Principals on the work of the task team. These reports recorded areas of agreement and disagreement between the constituencies represented in the task team. The process culminated in the adoption of a Declaration on Wage Inequality and Labour Market Stability which documents the agreement reached. All parties to the NEDLAC engagements have agreed to the outcomes, that is, the amendments to the LRA, the Accord and the Code of Good Practice.

In addition to the NEDLAC process, the Department of Labour consulted with the SAPS and the NPA on the Accord on Collective Bargaining and Industrial Action and the Code of Good Practice on Collective Bargaining, Industrial Action and Picketing. The CCMA has also been briefed on the outcomes of the NEDLAC process.

Table on consultations:

1. Government Departments and Agencies (See above)	Economic growth, investment, improved productivity and faster job creation require a stable labour market in which the rights and responsibilities of all stakeholders are respected and promoted. Right to strike a constitutional right and a legitimate exercise of power. Prolonged and violent strike action has potential to cause serious harm, to employers, employees and those outside the workplace. Collective bargaining should be promoted as an instrument through which to mediate needs and interests of employers and employees.	Support	All amendments incorporated in final outcomes.	Yes. Sections 69, 95-99, 150A-E.

1.6. Describe possible disputes arising out of the implementation of the proposal, and system for settling and appealing them. How onerous will it likely be for members of the public to lodge a complaint and how burdensome and expeditious is the proposed dispute-settlement procedure?

Labour relations disputes will be dealt with in accordance with the Labour Relations Act as amended. Disputes relating to the Accord on Collective Bargaining and Industrial Action will be dealt with through engagement and negotiation between the affected parties.

2. Impact Assessment

2.1. Describe the costs and benefits of implementing the proposal to the groups identified in point 1.5 above, using the following chart. Add more rows if required

2.2. Describe the changes required in budgets and staffing in government in order to implement the proposal. Identify where additional resources would be required for implementation. It is assumed that existing staff are fully employed and cannot simply absorb extra work without relinquishing other tasks.

No envisaged change in staffing in government departments, however there is a likely increase in the workload of the CCMA associated with implementation of the legal amendments and the Code of Good Practice over the next two years of the medium term expenditure framework. Costs associated with the increased functions relate to support for balloting and picketing rules, advisory arbitration processes, support for negotiations and facilitation, advocacy and capacity building. Initial cost estimates are being developed and will be refined during the period in which the legislative amendments are finalised and published for comment. A costing exercise will be completed by the time of the next budget cycle.

2.3. Describe how the proposal minimises implementation and compliance costs:

The proposal does carry cost implications for CCMA Commissioners who may be required to verify strike ballot results. These costs could be reduced by the involvement of private agencies in verification of strike ballots and the costs being borne by the parties to a dispute. Similarly, bargaining councils have the ability to cover costs through the levy income obtained from parties within their sectors.

Government stakeholders consulted include the Department of Higher Education and Training which will be asked to ensure that Sector Education and Training Authorities support the training aspect of the implementation process. Some costs of training will however be borne by trade unions and employers' associations.

3. Managing Risk

3.1. Describe the main risks to the achievement of the desired ends of the policy/bill/regulations/other and/ or to the national priorities (aims) that could arise from adoption of the proposal. Also describe the measures taken to manage the identified risks. Add more rows if necessary.

Identified Risk	Mitigation Measures
Non-adherence to the Declaration on Wage Inequality and Labour Market Stability	Pressure to be exerted on parties through the Committee of Principals
Lack of adherence to constitutional provisions relating to strike balloting	Publication of notices of intention to cancel the registration of trade unions
Legal challenges to extension of collective agreements in terms of amendments to LRA.	Effective advocacy of legal amendments and adherence to due administrative process in extension of collective agreements to non-parties
Higher than expected costs of implementation of legal amendments and Code of Good Practice.	Effective monitoring of implementation, revised costing estimates and consideration of fee for service as provided for in section 123 of LRA.

3.2. Describe the mechanisms included in your proposal for monitoring implementation, evaluating the outcomes, and modifying the implementation process if required. Estimate the minimum amount of time it would take from the start of the implementation process to identify a major problem and remedy it.

Mechanisms:

The proposal will be monitored through CCMA operational reporting as well as through the activities of the office of the Registrar of Labour Relations who monitors compliance by trade union and employer organisations with the LRA.

The LRA make provision for employers to report to the Department of Labour any strike taking place in their firms, using form 9.2 of the LRA. All these mechanisms will generate information that will be monitored and modifications made to the implementation process, if necessary.
